RESEARCH

PaperCraft: a teacher-in-the-loop LLM authoring tool for Cambridge KET/PET MAY 2026 TO PRESENT

Final year project, sole developer and research design

Designed a seven-stage generation pipeline with teacher adjudication as a hard gate, encoding published item-writing rules for 15 Cambridge item types and auditing generated text against CEFR A2/B1 wordlists.

Instrumented the workflow so that teacher edit distance and classical item statistics (difficulty, point-biserial discrimination, distractor analysis) are captured as a by-product of normal use.

Wrote the full evaluation protocol: paired task timing, SUS, NASA-TLX, content-quality rubric, semi-structured interview. Instruments are complete; data collection has not begun.

Transcreation in the age of generative AI: human translators versus LLMs in film title translation OCT 2025 TO PRESENT

Co-authored paper in preparation, three-person faculty-advised team

Contributed the cognitive-linguistic framing: a three-tier analytical model separating translation strategy from cognitive operation from cultural schema, with four schema operations ordered by cognitive load.

Built the literature synthesis across functionalist title translation, regional norm divergence within Greater China, the LLM translation paradigm shift and documented cultural bias in frontier models; verified every DOI field by field.

Argued that reference-overlap metrics such as BLEU are structurally unsuited to transcreation because they penalise the divergence that constitutes expertise.

TEACHING

Primary English Teacher, Cambridge KET MAY 2024 TO SEP 2025

Guangzhou Bella Education Technology · Guangzhou, China

Taught two small KET classes and the New Concept English curriculum, authoring practice material by hand each week, roughly two hours per exercise set.

That authoring burden, and the inability to control item difficulty with the small pool of official past papers available, is the problem PaperCraft was built to address.

English Teaching Assistant, Middle School Division JAN 2024 TO FEB 2024

New Oriental Education & Technology Group · Guangzhou, China

Supported bilingual eloquence training for over 120 junior high students; graded assessments and ran one-to-one tutoring.
